12th SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME

June 21st, 2020

Important Role of a Father

It should not be denied that the man in relation to a child is important. Fathers have an important role to play in the lives of their children. Nurturing, rearing and training children is not the exclusive duty, right, privilege, prerogative of mothers. Both parents, father and mother, have specific roles to perform, which are mutually complementary in the upbringing of their children.

Fathers should be close to their children from their most tender years in order to win their trust, confidence and love.

Fathers should spend as much time with their children as possible, whether it be working together, playing together, or just walking and talking together. This should be done together with the whole brood of youngsters, and then again on an individual, one on one basis, where the youngster can feel that Dad belongs to him or here, exclusively. In this day and age Dads and children need to get to know each other and love each other, and mutually enrich their lives.

Fathers, talk to God, talk to Him alone for your strength and guidance, and talk to Him in the presence of your children and with your children; as if He were right there in the group—for He is! Teach them to pray to the Heavenly Father, who loves them with an everlasting love. Be to your children the good father Joseph, the carpenter from Nazareth, was to his foster Son, Jesus, the natural Son of God and of the Virgin Mary.

Fathers, your example will be a shining, guiding light for your children throughout their whole lives, even when they become grandfathers and grandmothers.

They will never forget you.

Holy Scripture says, “They who instruct may unto righteousness will shine as stars for all eternity!”

---Rev. C.E.K
